BREAKING NEWS

Entire Movie Missing!

Movie star Buster Chaplin is left reeling today following an alleged break-in at the Hollywood Studios in which all footage from his latest movie was stolen. Filming wrapped on his latest flick 'Love in an Elevator' this past evening. Not one hour later, studio staff noticed all footage was gone without trace. This is the latest in a series of catastrophic events for Chaplin, who never properly recovered from the 'cursed' movie he worked on a couple years back. He's reportedly gone into hiding to escape angry investors who no doubt rue the day they took another chance on him. Rumour has it, props and costume have already started arriving at the studio for Chaplin's next project, Love Story at Sea - which was due to commence filming this week, but may be put on hold as investors are pulling out in yet another financial blow for Chaplin.
